FEBRUARY CULTURAL MEETING AND STOCQ

Another hot one but still a good roll-up of dedicated members and some nice plants benched, the stand-out being John and Bev's Ascda. Ken Kone which won Judge's and Popular choices.

Treasurer Ian reported that with the help of a generous bridging loan from one of our foundation members financing of the first stage of our building is assured without the risk of any liquidity problems.

Mel and Lynn tried valiantly to show us Mel's slides from his trip to the Werribee National Conference but technology was against us on the day.

Bev was interested for the members to choose the most aromatic orchid which may be worth considering in future? Judges were T. Davis, M. Wheeler, J. Hopgood, J. Stokes.

At the STOCQ AGM the previous weekend the expansion of the STOCQ boundary up as far as Rockhampton was confirmed making STOCQ one of the biggest orchid entities in Australia with 19 affiliates in total. More than 100 people attended the AGM which was an excellent response.

All office holders accepted to stay on for another year including our own Mel Wheeler as Registrar.

After the AGM Shane Snow gave an excellent presentation on growing dendrobiums, in particular spatulata type. Judging by the quality of the plants he had for sale we could certainly learn a lot from him.

The BIOS attendees then visited the collection of Doug Wilson, which was impressive, before returning home.

Next STOCQ meeting to be held at Boyne Tannum on 6th November.

JUDY'S JOTTINGS

Great News!!!! Since the decision was made to start building our home, the tree has been felled, the building contract signed and deposit paid. Once the stump is removed and the ground levelled - it's all systems go.

Have you read February's Orchids Australia magazine. Woh! Two stories of our Q150 year. Will be ever stop singing the praises of our secretary Lynn. She's a GEM. She also secured us coverage in Qld Council of Garden Clubs Newsletter. With Gwendella doing so well on the local front we are certainly well-served for publicity.

The STOCQ AGM was held in Gympie on Sat. 20th. the Committee was re-elected and our Mel Wheeler is still the Registrar of Judges. Oh! yes, must announce John Stokes and yours truly have been elevated to AOC Associate Judges. Gee! now there's just three years to go.

Hard to believe that our Easter Show is just under a month away. With the White Elephant Stall being a new addition, it's time Ladies and Gents to clear out our cupboards of those unused and unwanted items.

Yes, I know that's more work for us all. Cheers

EASTER SHOW

This is shaping up to be a big fundraising event for the society now that the new home is becoming a reality so we are calling for an extra special effort from all our members so dig deep people (to the extent you can of course).

Themes for flower arrangements are (1) An Easter Arrangement-He is Risen (any flowers may be used) and (2) Foliage in Autumn tones.

Everyone is encouraged to donate cooking ingredients or cash for same to one of the Catering Committee.

The Show Schedule is now on the website.

Sponsorships for the various classes are an important aspect of fundraising and payment for these to Treasurer Ian as soon as possible would be appreciated.

Prize amounts are shown below and you can sponsor as many or as few of these as you are able. You can also nominate the class you wish to sponsor.

Champion Orchid of Show	$100	Class Prizes
Reserve Champion	$50	First	$20
Champion Species	$40	Second	$10
Champion Specimen	$40	Third	$5
Champion Foliage	$40
Champion Floral Art	$40

Attention Novices

We particularly would like to encourage all novices to bench plants at our shows. It is not hard. Just turn up at around 4.30pm on the Thursday with your plant(s) and someone from the Committee will be happy to guide you through the process.

White Elephant Stall—this is a new addition to the Show. Donations are sought of items with some intrinsic value (ie saleable). Delivery on Friday morning (priced if you wish) and collected Saturday after presentations if not sold. Anything not collected will be donated to charity. Please support this new initiative.

SHOW AND TELL

Show Champion at Aspley Show was Paph. St Swithin x Toni Semple which is the same cross benched by Wal and Jean Corney at our Jan Cultural Meeting. Plant in background is Rctm. Ladda Gold which was awarded Champion Specimen.

Lynn nominated this example of C. Fitz Eugene Dixon for Show and Tell but it was actually her Aliceara Dorothy Oka that took out the first. Did those judges get it wrong again!

Judges and Popular Choices was Ascda. Ken Kone benched by that intrepid duo B&J.

No obstacle too great for this bunch!

Popular Choice in the Foliage section was Pam Board's Caladium

NEW GROWERS

In spite of the threat of rain, 30 keen orchid growers met at Merv and Val Anderson's on 27th Feb. Everyone was able to hear Merv explain his use of coconut fibre as part of the potting medium in his orchid growing. Though a bit squeezey, we all were comfortable under the patio even when the downpour finally came. Thanks, Merv and Val for hosting the meeting. Secretary Lyn explained latest developments in our quest to build our own meeting place. Raffle winners could choose from packets of fruit or orchids. Winners in the new growers competition were the Macqueens with fine plants. Steph Maller's Den. Mickey Mew was judged the best in the Open section and the Mckinnons and Neldners plants were the other placegetters. Anderson's aglanaemea won the foliage section with Neldners second. Di Sirett encouraged support for the bus trips detailed in the Bulletin. Afternoon tea was enjoyed while the rain poured down. Next meeting will be on 27th March at the C. of C. Hall and will probably feature a couple of DVD segments relating to Orchids. The May meeting will be a visit to Noela Frizzo's Orchid Houses at Glasshouse and at the July meeting Ann Sales will tell us about Orchids of the World. Make sure your orchids are carefully prepared for the Easter Show.

Stephanie Maller's Den. Mickey 'Mew' was Judges' Choice in Experienced Section. Unfortunately Caroline Macqueen's Den. oligophyllum which was chosen in Learner's Section was too small for photo. (This miniature species comes from Vietnam and Thailand.)

March birthdays revealed secretly to the editor are: Maureen Elliot, Gwenda Davis, Vic Horton, Ian Macqueen. Happy Birthday one and all.

.THE INORGANIC/INERT ALTERNATIVE

For those of struggling with poor root development, decomposing organic mixes, poor air circulation around the roots and other problems which may to some extent be caused by the mix type you are using, the following article may be food for thought, bearing in mind there is not much new under the sun and people have been growing orchids for a long time

VERSAROCK® AS A POTTING MEDIUM FOR ORCHIDS

by Wendy Witnish (reprinted from OSCOV website)

I would like to tell you about my experience with Versarock®, a product widely used in hydroponic horticulture. It is a naturally occurring 'premixed' ceramic that has a highly porous structure that won't aggregate when wet. The granules typically have 4, 5 or 6 faces that provide pore spaces between granules, allowing good aeration and infiltration.

Versarock® interested me because its properties indicated that its use might take some of the hard work out of repotting and could perhaps eliminate repotting altogether, simply allowing me to keep potting on as my orchids grew. I began trialling three plants in January, 1996. Two months later these plants were doing quite well and I took the 'quantum leap' and repotted my entire collection of Australian natives and mixed genera into Versarock®.

I decided I would use all Versarock® or no Versarock®. Some growers mix it with their other potting materials to provide better aeration but in my case it would have defeated the purpose. If I mixed it with bark, I would have not been able to pot on, as old bark would first have to be removed. Versarock® is recyclable and can be sterilised but this would be difficult in the case of a Versarock®/bark mixture. Because Versarock® does not break down, I reasoned that it should be possible to pot small plants into large pots. This was a mistake because over-potting the plants did not establish a good root system. After repotting the orchids in smaller pots, they resumed growth very well. I've also found that my new 'mix' simplifies feeding with slow-release fertiliser - just tip off the top layer, add fertiliser and top up with Versarock®. It absorbs water very rapidly, so I hope that any tendency for root burn will be eliminated.

Versarock® is clean to use; it contains no fines apart from a little powder that washes through on watering. It has a tendency to turn green on top but this is not a problem as it's a simple matter to replace the topmost layer with fresh Versarock®, giving the pot a fresh, clean appearance. There also seems to be no build-up of salts from continued fertiliser use. I've heard some growers say that slaters don't attack orchid roots but they and worms had a field day with some of my orchids, especially Sarcochilus, when they were potted in bark. Since potting in Versarock®, the problem has disappeared. I also hoped that it would deter snails but it hasn't! Most glasshouses have a mouldy smell, which I dislike. Versarock® has eliminated the mouldy smell and its use could therefore be an asset to those growers who are allergic to mould. Perhaps watering can be carried out less frequently when orchids are potted in Versarock® but I still water my plants as often as I did when using bark. If plants should dry out, they rewet very rapidly in Versarock®.

With the exception of cymbidiums, which don't grow well for me, I've had real success with Versarock®. I've grown a plant of Encyclia cochleata since 1990 but it had never developed a good root system until I repotted it in Versarock®; now it is well established and flowers for months on end. Another success story is Stelis porschiana, which has flourished since I transferred it to Versarock®. Previously, it kept falling out of its pot because its roots were so poor. My pride and joy, Howeara Mini Primi, a past winner at an OSCOV show, is thriving and covered in spikes again this year. Laelias love Versarock®, as do oncidiums (including the equitant types), laeliocattleyas, sarcochilus and dendrobiums; even my cool growing paphiopedilums are doing well.

Versarock® is available from several sources, including Duralite Pty. Ltd., 54 Old Dandenong Road, Heatherton (tel. 9551 6756). There are two grades, fine and coarse; I prefer the latter. "

(Notes from Editor – Duralite no longer sell Versarock due to freight costs. Some people do already use inorganic mixes solely (eg perlite, gravel, scoria, Maidenwell diatomite, spongite, crushed granite) or more commonly in combination with organic materials (eg bark and coir). And this is probably a variation of what is already available. The Maidenwell diatomite sounds very similar. Versarock seems however not to be readily available, at least not in coarse form. Supposedly it is mined at Chillagoe and sold by hydroponic supply stores but none I contacted sold it. And supposedly it is the sole ingredient of one of the types of kitty litter (clay type) sold everywhere. I looked at a couple of these but they are very fine and I would be concerned about compaction and they don't look like the photo of Versarock. Also read some kitty litter may break down depending on what type of clay it is. Attapulgit is recommended for Bonsai growers. Confused? Anyway may be worth a try if you can find it, or something similar. Barry Kable knows of someone successfully growing orchids in 10mm quarry gravel and I noticed again at last weekend's International Orchid Fair that Alice's Nursery from Townsville pot in a local gravel and Easy Orchids had Phallies potted in expanded clay pellets. Lot of variety out there when you look! At least these types of media should be more forgiving if one over waters which I am prone to do.)

Versarock

That's all, folks.
